"Newark. Oct. 9, 1852.—I have never met with any preparation which, in cleaning the scalp, would, like Debay's Niourkrenolee, leave the hair in such a silk-like condition. Respectfully yours, Sarah W. Vandergood."

"New York, Oct. 22, 1852.—With much pleasure I can bear testimeny to the very great excellence of Debay's Niourkrenolee as an indispensable appendage to the toilet, having in my own experience, and the high encomiums bestowed upon it by numerous friends, most unequivocal proofs of its estimable virtues, as one of the best preparations in use for cleaning, purifying and strengthening the growth of the hair; and I have no hesitation in recommending it to all who are desirous of cultivating a rich, beautiful and silken head of hair.

HENRY LONG, No. 43 Ann street.

"NEW YORK, March 19, 1852.—It is with no little pleasure that I am able to bear testimony to the uniform efficacy of Debay's Nioukrenolee, for restoring, preserving and beautifying the hair. It is, in my opinion, the best article for the purpose in use. I have found it no less successful in alleviating inflammation and pain.

"We might refer to many of the first merchants in the city of New York, in corroboration of what has here been stated in favor of Pebay's Nioukrenolee; and among them we would mention Jecemiah Wilbur, Esq., of the firm of Wilbur & Scott—formerly Masters, Markoe & Co.
